25X1C [REDACTED] Comment. [REDACTED] Chinese Communist and North Korean representatives who met at Yenchi on 27 November 1947 decided to make all of the former Chientao Province a "self-governing" area with its administration under the control of the North Korean People's Committee.) 25X1A

1. In April 1946, LIN Chom-chung (林占中), a representative of the North Korean People's Committee, started negotiations with LIN Piao (林彪), commander of the Chinese Communist forces in Manchuria, concerning the establishment of an autonomous government in the former Chientao Province under the administrative control of the North Korean government.

25X1A

- 25X1C [REDACTED] Comment. [REDACTED] in November 1947 LIM Chom-chung was the North Korean representative at a meeting in Harbin of Communist delegates from most of the eastern asiatic countries.)
2. Because the population of Chientao Province is predominantly Korean, it had been difficult for Chinese Communist officials to control this area. However, the Chinese Communist authorities believed that, if an autonomous government completely under the control of the North Korean People's Committee were established in Chientao Province, it would meet with opposition from the Chinese Communists not only in Chientao Province but in all parts of Manchuria. Therefore, in the latter part of 1947, representatives of the Chinese Communists and the North Korean People's Committee compromised and agreed upon the following:

- a. To establish a new province to be known as the Suining Province which would include all the four hsien of the former Mutanchiang Province - Ningan, Mulung, Tungning and Suiyang - and all the five hsien of the former Chientao Province - Yenchi, Wang Ch'ing, Hun Ch'un, Holung and Ant'u.

25X1C [REDACTED] Comment. During the Japanese occupation of Manchuria, the south-eastern part of the present Kirin Province bordering on North Korea was known as Chientao Province and the southeastern part of the present Sungchiang Province bordering on the former Chientao Province was known as Mutanchiang Province.)

- b. To make Mutanchiang City (129-37, 44-35) the capital of the new province of Suining.
